

ERIN
Not long enough.

ERIN TULANE, 50 with a crooked smile and a blue uniform with her name tag on it, stands behind Terry.

TERRY DONOVAN
Erin! Jesus it's great to see you.

Start:

ERIN
How ya been Rock?

TERRY DONOVAN
Good, great. Erin this is my son Sean.

ERIN
My God, I remember when Mary was pregnant with this little devil, now look at him. Handsome like his old man.

TERRY DONOVAN
It's his birthday today, thought I'd take him for the best cake in the city. It's been years Erin, how ya been?

ERIN
I'm doing okay, I own this dump now, bought it from Tommy years ago.

TERRY DONOVAN
No kidding? Congratulations, that's great.

ERIN
So where you been Rock, I mean it must be 8-9 years since I seen you. I heard you moved out to Marine Park?

TERRY DONOVAN
Yep, got a nice house there, nice neighborhood.

ERIN
Good Terry, you got yourself out of this place, I'm proud of you.

TERRY DONOVAN
Thanks, It's nice to come back and visit though, I kinda miss this joint. Do me a favor and keep Sean company while I hit the head.

ERIN
Sure. Hey Terry take a look on the wall in the back I got some pictures of you and the boys up there.

Erin pours Sean another glass of Milk.

ERIN (CONT'D)

Your father looks great. I swear he looks younger now than when used to hang around here.

SEAN

That's because he stopped drinking.

ERIN

Yeah, I guess that might do it. Your dad used to put them away.

SEAN

You called my dad Rock, was that his nickname or something?

ERIN

Yeah, Rocky. Your dad was a little how you say, rambunctious, when he was younger. Well with the group he hung out with I guess he had to be. He was always getting into it with someone, your father.

SEAN

Really?

ERIN

Sure...Most of the time it was after he had a few in him when he'd get his Irish up. After a while the guys started calling him Rocky, you know like the movie.

SEAN

That's funny...the Rock.

Terry walks back in to the room, looking a little frazzled.

ERIN

End: I was just telling your boy here what an upstanding citizen you were back in the day.

~~TERRY DONOVAN~~

~~Yeah... Erin sorry to run out on you but we got to go. C'mon Sean.~~

~~Terry throws twenty bucks on the table.~~

~~SEAN~~

~~TERRY DONOVAN~~

~~We got someplace we got to go. I didn't realize the time. C'mon lets move. Thanks a lot Erin see you soon...~~
